

ANNUAL MINISTRY REPORT: 2010

Gospel centered Broadly connected

A missions agency for the new and networked world of campus churches, church planting, and city-focused ministries

◀ Thomas Mauriello
Executive Director

It's a perennial fact that the world is changing even while God remains faithfully the same. Experts tell us that our cell phones and computers — connecting people and information — have created the biggest cultural shift in 500 years. In some ways, we see this inter-connection affecting the world of evangelical Christian mission as well. And GCM is at the center of it.

Today's younger potential missionaries are affected by the shift. They are both more connected and more rooted.

Their experience and exposure is broad-based, making them less likely to be tied to one particular Protestant denomination, and comfortable working across lines. We find them coming from non-denominational churches and forming ad hoc groups that like "tags" more than "categories" because they effortlessly fit in more than one type at once.

And they are locally focused and relationally oriented: concerned about the particular stories of the people and neighborhoods around them who need Jesus Christ.

The details

How does a next-generation missionary engage their local context with resources from an Internet-big world?

They need a partner. And GCM is perfectly positioned to be there.

Our history roots us in the unique combination of campus ministry + church planting — where else could you learn to be on the youthful edge of Christian mission? We have more than twenty years of experience establishing the systems needed to support adventurous, energetic missionaries.

Our future is even brighter. New church planting networks are exploding. Campus ministry is more vibrant than ever. And now that we have opened up our resources for broader partnership, we find that we fit right in. We keep hearing the same thing, "You'll help me raise the ministry funds? Provide health insurances and professional services? Care for donors? All to focus me on gospel ministry?" Yes!

Our heartbeat is evangelism, discipleship, and church planting for the next generation. And our ministry partnerships make it happen.

I think you'll be pleased to see our financial numbers. By God's amazing grace we have seen marked increases in donor generosity, even through the last three years of national financial recession. God is doing something here.

Through a shifting, digital world, Jesus' Great Commission "to make disciples" remains an fixed and extraordinarily important mission. GCM is gospel-centered, broadly-connected, and ready.

The highest standard of Christian financial integrity

We're honored that over 19,700 active donors trust GCM, and we intend to keep that trust.

Our 2010 financial records were audited by Capin Crouse, LLP, a national leader in non-profit accounting. Their report is always available upon request.

Our internal Audit Review Committee meets twice per year to approve audit reports and ensure that the highest standards are continually met.

Since 1992, we've maintained a membership with the Evangelical Council for Financial Accountability, with commitments to transparency, careful oversight and honoring charitable expectations.

Our missionaries are paid salaries set by our board based on their ministry experience and effectiveness. Nearly 90 percent of every dollar given to GCM goes directly to a designated ministry account (88 cents of each dollar from individual private donors, and more from certain churches and ministry partners). The other 10 percent is used for essential services to keep our missionaries well-supported in the field. We are proud of our efficiency and effectiveness in this important area.

Our missionaries are well supported

GCM relies on the generous gifts of others to financially support our ministries, and each year we are astounded by the faithfulness and generosity of our ministry partners.

Because God has called spirit-gifted people as his means of evangelism, discipleship, and church planting — we measure much of our success for our mission in how well our missionaries are provided for. We saw an increase of 7 percent giving in 2010 compared to 2009. The projections for 2011 are even better.

GIVING TO MISSIONARIES (in millions of dollars)

◀ Jon and Jenny Schreiner have been staff missionaries with GCM since 2006. They serve Grand View University, reaching out to students and engaging in discipleship. Together they bring the gospel to the campus and to the city of Des Moines, Iowa.
